The mysterious journey over time to understand the Mayan calendar and the universe

Gina Miranda Kingsley: a Minnesotan grandma, mother and calendar keeper. Born in Mesoamerica, she graduated as a computer analyst and programmer in Central America. She came to Minnesota and studied archeology at Hamline University. This helped her to unravel events that got triggered by an old shaman or spiritual guide she had encountered in Central America. This spiritual guide taught a young Gina about the Mayan calendar and told her that her destiny was to teach, understand, and keep track of the days.

Gina will relate how turns on the river of time brought her to Minnesota to begin a mission as a messenger for the ancestral time. And how that knowledge unlocks the mysteries of times and how it affects and changes our lives. Gina will talk about the Mayan calendar and how this ancestral knowledge could be beneficial to your life. She will address the real meaning of the new era recently celebrated by Hollywood and doomsday Sayers in 2012.

Gina is an adviser to the Mayan exhibit that is currently on display at the Minnesota Science Museum. Gina was recently featured in this Star Tribune article:
